FOREWORD

Broadway's close connection with the arts stretches back over 130 years to the famous Broadway Colony of artists - the painters, musicians and writers, most notably John Singer Sargent who came to the village and found inspiration for their creativity. Broadway remains a destination for art-lovers to this day.

The biennial Broadway Arts Festival, founded in 2010, now attracts attendance and participation from far and wide. As it has grown, so has the task of organising it, and I would like to thank Andrew Dakin and his management committee for all their hard work and skill in producing this year's exciting programme. I would also like to thank our sponsors and benefactors for their generosity.

The Festival also looks to the future and as a registered charity makes financial grants to young arts students from the local area. They, in turn, have been generous in their support of the Festival. Hopefully, they will also play their part in carrying forward Broadway's rich artistic heritage and its place as a vibrant centre for the creative arts.

John Kiszely

Chairman of Trustees The Broadway Arts Festival Trust

WELCOME

The 2020 Broadway Arts Festival promises to be the best yet! Our inspiration has always been Broadway's history as a centre of the creative arts, and that includes arts in all forms - painting, sculpture, music, literature, ceramics, drama, dance, the art of the aarden and every possible expression of creativity.

Whatever your tastes and whatever your age. I hope that you will find a areat range of events in all these genres to stimulate you and expand your horizons.

Participation has always been a unique feature of the Festival, and this year we have an even wider range of opportunities to learn new skills or improve existing ones, with art workshops and demonstrations to learn from established artists and craftspeople, and the chance to take part in creating a musical evening in just one day, whatever your singing abilities.

For those who just want to watch and listen, there's a wide choice of musical events from jazz to classical, theatre, art exhibitions, and a full programme of talks on a whole range of subjects by distinguished speakers.

We'll also be showcasing the work of the young people embarking on a career in the arts, to whom we award bursaries each year, and providing opportunities for the children in our local schools to learn about the arts and to give them the opportunity to join in that creative spirit that the arts provide.

Browse the programme, select what you'd like to see, and book early - many events last time sold out very quickly!

I do hope you enjoy the Festival in 2020.

A permanent exhibition about the worldfamous Broadway Colony of renowned artists, writers, musicians and actors, most notably John Singer Sargent, is installed in a dedicated room of the Broadway Museum and Art Gallery on behalf of the Broadway Arts Festival.

This important piece of Broadway heritage recounts the interestingly interwoven lives of those who came to live, work and play together here in the late 19th and early 20th Century. Written and curated by Karen Bloch, this fascinating story is told in a beautifully illustrated and highly informative display.

An Artist's Legacy, Sargent, his Sister & their Friends

Following a very generous gift to the Ashmolean Museum of a group of works by John Singer Sargent, his sister Emily, and contemporaries Augustus and Gwen John and Phillip Wilson Steer, the first public showing has been kindly offered to Broadway Museum and Art Gallery.

The very existence of the Broadway Arts
Festival springs from a celebration of the time John Singer Sargent and his friends spent in the village, when the iconic work 'Carnation
Lily, Lily, Rose' was started in the grounds of Farnham House, to be completed the following year at Russell House, and now one of the best loved paintings in the Tate Gallery.
